Our Group assignment was good as we had some challenges to overcome. Our web app is a shoe website that allows you to purchase the latest shoes on the market whilst making them very affordable to our customers. In the latter part of this document we'll explain what segments of our code do to our website. When the code is run the user will see discounts on sneakers of their choice. We came up with the idea by thinking of our favourite things and said "why not a shoe webapps". This is a great choice because people of our generation love sneakers especially Jordan's so we know that web app will be great to ensure good sales which will lead to best incomes as college students.

Our website uses a navigation bar and an alternative background styling element is organized by the index.html file. The `` indicate a placeholder for future background styling or content. Using Bootstrap classes (navbar, navbar-expand-lg, navbar-light, and bg-light) and a subdued box shadow effect, the `<nav>` section creates a responsive navigation bar. It has a collapsed container (navbar-collapse) that encloses a list of navigation elements (``, ``) and links (``) styled as the company logo, Home, Cart, and About sections, as well as a collapsible button (navbar-toggler) for smaller screens. These links use

Font Awesome symbols to graphically represent each component of the website and point readers to "about.html " and "cart.html" among other relevant pages.

The login file for our website compromises of functions which are in JavaScript, we have a call create account() and this function is responsible for the names, addresses, email, phone and passwords our users. This helps us to get users trust when shopping for the best sneakers so they can have a secure account when visiting the website again.
